Performance and market commentary

The Squirrel Monthly Income Fund return for March was 0.49%¹, contributing to a 1-year fund return of 6.36%¹. The Fund offers investors competitive stable monthly income by providing flexible, competitive funding solutions for NZ's housing market.

The Fund's portfolio is diversified across 393 loans, including 286 construction loans and 107 home loans. Its exposure is managed via the Squirrel Wholesale Construction Loan Fund (74.12%) and the Squirrel Wholesale Home Loan Fund (25.87%), with 0.01% held in cash. The portfolio's Loan-to-Value Ratio (LVR) remains conservative at 62.20%.

At month-end, the Fund was invested in three home loans ($741,002.35 or 1.21%) that are either over-term and/or in arrears, or both. Since month-end, one loan ($92,321.66 of fractional investment or 0.15% of the Fund) is expected to be repaid through a sale of property. Two loans ($648,680.69 of fractional investment or 1.06% of the Fund) are in arrears and expected to clear in May or June.

The Fund is invested in eight construction loans (totalling $2,982,197.66 or 1.62% of the Fund) that are either over-term and/or in arrears, or both. Since month-end, three loans ($793,139.07 of fractional investment or 0.43% of the Fund) have since been repaid. Another three loans ($1,060,868.57 of fractional investment or 0.58% of the Fund) are expected to be repaid during May or June, with the remaining two loans ($1,128,190.03 of fractional investment or 0.61% of the Fund) expected to be repaid later in the year.

The New Zealand housing market has shown signs of losing momentum after a modest recovery earlier in the year. While sales activity remains around average levels, demand indicators such as buyer enquiry and mortgage applications have softened, reflecting ongoing economic uncertainty and reduced confidence.

Higher living costs and shifting interest rate expectations continue to weigh on sentiment, with many buyers taking a more cautious approach. As a result, house prices are expected to remain relatively flat in the near term, with any recovery likely to be gradual.

For developers, this environment reinforces a more selective and disciplined approach to new projects, although completed stock is generally still being absorbed by the market slowly.

For the Fund, these conditions remain supportive of consistent income generation. A diversified portfolio of residential construction and home loans, combined with conservative loan-to-value ratios, continues to provide resilience. In addition, a higher interest rate environment may support returns over time, reinforcing the Fund's ability to deliver stable, regular income to investors despite a more subdued market backdrop.
